A School Garden • 阅读

初中英语阅读 · LingoSheets

Last spring, our class started a garden behind the school. At first, nobody knew what to plant. Our teacher, Ms. Li, gave each group a small plot and a packet of seeds. My group chose tomatoes and sunflowers. Every morning before class, we watered the plants and pulled out weeds. It was hard work, but we liked watching the tiny green shoots appear. By June, the sunflowers were taller than us. We sold the tomatoes at a school market and used the money to buy books for the classroom. The garden taught us that good things take time.

Last summer, my family went to the mountains. We stayed in a small wooden house near a river. In the morning, we hiked along a path and saw birds and wild flowers. In the afternoon, we swam in the cold river and cooked dinner outside. At night, the sky was full of stars—more than I had ever seen in the city. On the last day, it rained, so we stayed inside and played cards. It was not a perfect holiday, but it was a memorable one. I learned that being in nature helps me feel calm.
